

Aléatico N

Name of the variety in France

Aléatico

Origin

This variety has been found in Corsica for a long time and would seemingly be from Italy (Tuscany).

Synonyms

In France, this variety can officially be called "Aleaticu" regarding plant propagation material.

Legal information

In France, Aléatico is officially listed in the "Catalogue of vine varieties" on the A list and classified. This variety is also listed in the catalogues of other Member States of the European Union: Italy and Malta.

Use

Wine grape variety.

Evolution of cultivated areas in France

Descriptive elements

The identification is based on:

- the tip of the young shoot with a low to medium density of prostate hairs,
- the bronzed and reddish young leaves,
- the adult leaves with three or five lobes, a barely open petiole sinus, long teeth with straight sides, no anthocyanin coloration, and on the lower side of the leaves, no or very low density of erect hairs and a very low density of prostate hairs,
- the round or obloid berries, slightly muscat flavored with a blue black or red black skin when ripe.

Phenology

Bud burst: 2 days after Chasselas.

Grape maturity: mid-season, 2 weeks after Chasselas.

Suitability for cultivation and agronomic production

This variety is fairly fertile and has good vigor. It has an erect bearing and can be short pruned. It is recommended for hot and dry terrain.

Susceptibility to diseases and pests

Aléatico is very sensitive to powdery mildew, grey rot and sour rot.

Technological potentiality

The bunches and berries are medium in size. This variety with muscat aromas, has good accumulation potential of sugars in the berries and satisfactory titrable acidity. It gives bright, shiny but not very intense in color wines. It seems well adapted for making natural sweet wines. The muscat flavor is often slight and sometimes fleeting.

Clonal selection in France

The seven certified Aléatico clones carry the numbers 802, 859, 860, 861, 892, 893 and 894.
